

In a material sense too, the school received many offers of assistance. In 1932, William Dickson offered the use of his dams to enable children from the school to have swimming lessons and life saving classes. His generosity was officially acknowledged by the Education Department with the hope that "you will see your way to continue this material assistance for many years."